Throat singing is a unique art form of sound extraction, in which the performer extracts two notes at the same time: the main tone and overtone. Thus is obtained two-voice solo. Such singing is typical for small peoples of Siberia, Mongolia, Tibet and some other peoples of the world. Interest in throat singing is steadily growing because of its unusual nature, as it seems simply incredible the fact that these sounds are made by a person. Hearing them, you feel that you have come into contact with an archaic culture filled with mysticism.
