Bora drifts in from the Sakhalin shore — a breath of wind, free and wild. It comes without warning, filling the air with salt, the whisper of waves, and the warmth of sunlit stones. Then it fades away, leaving only a quiet memory of nature’s untamed strength.

In our space, every detail captures this spirit. Beneath your feet, the black floor recalls the softness of beach sand, while dark wood and rugged stone summon the forests and cliffs where the island’s spirit lives. Glass blocks and a chandelier catch and scatter the light, mimicking the shimmering dance of sea and sky. Above, the ceiling is crafted from architectural paper, light and translucent like drifting clouds.

We created a place where Sakhalin’s wild beauty meets a sense of home. Here, you can feel the wind and let time stand still for a moment.
